Introduction

The SQE - The new pathway to qualifying as a solicitor in England & Wales.

The Solicitors Qualifying Examination (SQE) is a centralised assessment for aspiring solicitors in England and Wales, introduced to standardise the process of qualifying as a solicitor.

Why Was the SQE Introduced

The SQE was introduced by the Solicitors Regulation Authority (SRA) with the aim of creating a more consistent, transparent, and fair route to qualification for all aspiring solicitors. The previous system, which included the Legal Practice Course (LPC) and training contracts, faced criticism for being expensive and inaccessible to many candidates, potentially creating barriers to entry into the legal profession.

Key reasons for the introduction of the SQE include:

Standardisation: The SQE ensures that all candidates, regardless of their educational background or training route, are assessed against the same standards. This helps to maintain a consistent level of competence among newly qualified solicitors.

Fairness and Accessibility: By removing the need for a traditional training contract and offering more flexible pathways to qualification, the SQE aims to make the legal profession more accessible to a diverse range of candidates.

Transparency: The SQE provides a clear and transparent assessment process, making it easier for employers and clients to trust in the qualifications of newly admitted solicitors.

Cost Efficiency: The new structure is designed to reduce the overall cost of qualifying as a solicitor, making it more affordable for candidates from various socio-economic backgrounds.

Who Can Take the SQE?

Law Graduates: Those who have completed a law degree (LLB) in the UK or an equivalent qualification from another jurisdiction. The SQE provides a standardized pathway for law graduates to qualify as solicitors.

Non-Law Graduates: Individuals who hold a degree in a non-law subject can also pursue a career as a solicitor and proceed straight onto the SQE without the requirement for a conversion course or Graduate Diploma in Law.

International Candidates: The SQE offers a streamlined route to meet the necessary standards for international lawyers looking to practice as solicitors in England and Wales.

Legal Apprentices: Those undertaking legal apprenticeships can add the SQE to their qualification process, combining practical experience with the skills assessments required to qualify to practice as a solicitor.

Paralegals and Other Legal Professionals: Existing legal professionals, such as paralegals who wish to qualify as solicitors can often leverage their experience towards QWE and fast-track their way to becoming a solicitor.

Qualifying Work Experience (QWE)

QWE can be gained in one block, like a two-year training contract, or in stages, in up to a maximum of four organisations.

There are no requirements about when to undertake QWE. It can be undertaken before, during or after taking the SQE assessments.

Candidates' experience must be signed-off in accordance with the SRA's requirements. This would usually be the responsibility of the Compliance Officer for Legal Practice (COLP) or a qualified solicitor within the place of work. However, this can also be fulfilled by a nominated solicitor from outside the organisation with direct knowledge of the work being undertaken. The solicitor does not need to hold a practising certificate.

What Counts as QWE?

QWE must involve providing legal services. The Legal Services Act 2007 (s. 12) defines legal activity and can help candidates decide whether their role involves delivering legal services. Because some or all of our competencies are likely to be part of delivering legal services, any work that meets this definition is likely to be QWE.

Questions to help ascertain if work meets the QWE requirements:

- Does or did the job, role or experience involve providing legal services? The Legal Services Act 2007 (s. 12) defines legal activity.
- Does or did the job, role or experience involve real life legal services provision rather than stimulated legal services provision?
- Has the individual been exposed to at least two competences in the Statement of Solicitor Competence?
- Has or will the job, role or experience be carried out in no more than four organisations?
- Has or will the job, role or experience be at least two years' full time or equivalent? We will not prescribe what full time (or equivalent) means.
- Has or will the job, role or experience be confirmed by a solicitor or COLP?

Why sponsor your employees through the SQE?

For 81% of firms surveyed*, recruitment is the top challenge
when it comes to talent.

Why Sponsor Your Employees Through the SQE

01

Cost-Effective Investment

Lower Recruitment Costs: Recruiting a new solicitor often involves significant expenses, including recruitment agency fees, advertising costs, and onboarding processes. Sponsoring current employees can be more cost-effective.

Retention of Talent: Investing in current staff can enhance loyalty and reduce turnover, leading to lower long-term recruitment and training costs.

Enhanced Employee Engagement and Loyalty

Motivation and Morale: Providing development opportunities boosts employee morale and motivation. Employees feel valued and are likely to be more engaged and productive.

Retention: Employees are more likely to stay with a firm that invests in their professional growth, reducing attrition rates and retaining valuable institutional knowledge.

Improved Culture

Culture and Values Alignment: Current staff already understand and align with your organisation or firm's culture, values, and practices. Supporting their professional development strengthens this alignment.

04

Increased Internal Mobility and Flexibility

Versatile Workforce: Developing internal talent allows for greater flexibility in workforce planning and can help fill critical roles more quickly and effectively.

Succession Planning: Preparing existing staff for higher qualifications supports effective succession planning and ensures continuity in key roles.

05

Demonstrated Commitment to Professional Development

Attracting Talent: Firms known for investing in their employees' professional development are more attractive to potential hires.

Reputation and Brand: A firm that invests in employee development builds a strong reputation as an employer of choice, enhancing its brand in the legal industry.

06

Better Performance and Client Satisfaction

High Standards of Service: Employees who are better trained and qualified can deliver higher standards of legal service, leading to improved client satisfaction and loyalty.

Competitive Advantage: Firms with highly qualified staff can differentiate themselves in the market, offering a competitive advantage over rivals who may not invest similarly in their employees.

Customised Skill Development

Immediate Application: Employees can immediately apply new skills and knowledge gained from the SQE preparation to their current work, benefiting the firm directly.

Tailored Training: Existing employees can tailor their learning with additional skills to the specific needs of the firm, ensuring that they acquire capabilities and knowledge directly relevant to their roles.

“My experience with BARBRI’s SQE1 coaching exceeded all my expectations. The spaced learning MCQs, mixed practice questions and the topic-wise lectures make the course really accessible and easy to follow. The best thing about the whole experience was the Personal Study Plan (PSP) which broke down the tasks for me to do each day and each week.

This helped push me to constantly achieve my goals week by week, which helped keep anxiety at bay. The PSP made sure that I had learnt everything and completed all my mocks right in time for my exams! I am pleased to report that I passed in the first quintile at my first attempt – so the course really works. Would 10/10 recommend BARBRI to anyone doing their SQE1.”
